26 April – 31 May 2014

Victoria Miro, Gallery II, 14 Wharf Rd, London N1 7RW

Top floor, adjacent building. Entrance via garden and across terrace.

Victoria Miro is delighted to present Memphis Living a series of new paintings and works on paper by Hernan Bas that runs across our Wharf Road and Mayfair galleries.

For his fourth show with the gallery, Bas extends his long interest in and exploration of the decorative arts, in particular rethinking and examining unique interiors. In past paintings he has taken inspiration from design classics such as J.M. Whistler's renowned 19th century Peacock Room. For this new body of work Bas fast-forwards to the 1980s, the decade of the artist's youth. Memphis Living is an homage to the designs of the short-lived Memphis Group founded in Milan by architect and designer Ettore Sottsass, designs Bas first encountered predominantly through their pop cultural references and simulations, and which he only later came to know as an aesthetic movement. Memphis styles became firmly rooted in Bas' pre-teenage subconsciousness, attesting to the prevalence of the "Memphis look" on the big and small screen in films like Tim Burton's Beetlejuice or kids' TV show Pee-wee's Playhouse.

The strategy of the post-modern Memphis studio was to challenge and subvert Modernist conventions of good taste, with a visual language dominated by flamboyant pattern, bold colour, graphic sculptural form and, frequently, humour. It is not only the aesthetics of the movement that has drawn Bas to revisit this energetic period, but also the idea of the artificial versus the real, the notion of the false being more authentic than the actuality (concepts which Bas links to another early influence, Joris-Karl Huysmans' Against Nature). Memphis style prioritises form over function and, for Bas, the Group's work comes as close to sculpture as any design movement in recent times.

The paintings and works on paper in Memphis Living borrow from this sculptural aesthetic. The artist has said of this new series that, as with a previous body of work in which he articulated a fascination with Futurism, he is "exploring new ways of interpreting a definitive and somewhat overlooked period in cultural history, developing works centred around the kinds of characters who populate my practice, imagining who is the boy/man who would make this sort of space his own, what his home might look like... and what sort of psychosis would lead to this?" Bas expands this idea further, saying "In my opinion, living 'Memphis' means more than a love of bright colours, pattern and uncomfortable seating. It was an impassioned moment, a daring, bold-formed and wildly influential movement that is just catching our rear-view attention again".

Hernan Bas was born in Miami, Florida in 1978. He currently lives and works in Miami and in Detroit, Michigan. Bas has been the subject of two major institutional solo shows: The Other Side at the Kunstverein Hannover in 2012, and a major survey show that opened at the Rubell Family Collection, Miami in 2007 and toured to the Brooklyn Museum of Art in 2009. Bas' work has also been included in Aquatopia: The Imaginary of the Ocean Deep, Nottingham Contemporary, travelling to Tate St. Ives (2013-2014); The Collectors, curated by Elmgreen & Dragset at Nordic and Danish Pavilions, Venice Biennale (2009); the Busan Biennale (2008); Like Color in Pictures at the Aspen Art Museum (2007); Ideal Worlds: New Romanticism in Contemporary Art at the Schirn Kunsthalle, Frankfurt (2005); the Whitney Biennial (2004); and It's Super Natural at The Museum of Contemporary Art, North Miami (2002).

The exhibition coincides with the publication by Rizzoli, New York of HERNAN BAS: a lavish monograph that is the most comprehensive publication devoted to the artist's career to date. With over 200 colour plates and with texts by Christian Rattemeyer, Jonathan Griffin, and an interview with Nancy Spector. The book is available at reception, price £47.50.

The exhibition continues with a series of works on paper at Victoria Miro Mayfair, 14 St George Street, W1S 1FE
